

I enjoy the peacefulness at home that comes with being part of the current no call list. I do not believe that any change weakening this law would be in the best interest of the consumers who took the time to be included on the list. If we want people to call us we give them our permission. Telemarketing is a very poor way to do business. Our lives are hectic enough without having our quiet, at home, down time constantly interrupted.